Further Particulars of the Shocking Murder

From Boston Mail. Oct 28.)

Every thing in the soom occupied by this young, beautiful and fascinating, but fallen woman, not deranged by the terrible scene so lately smoted, testified to the sex and taste of its unfortunate occupant. A work-box, cosmetics of various kinde, a parasol, and a pair of white sions, lay carlessly upon the table as though their owner had but just left them. It was truly a painful spectacle, and one which will not readily be effaced from the memory of those who looked upon it.

Do call and explain to me the cause of your staying away so long.

MARY ANN CASHMER.

It appeared from some evidence introduced afterwards that this person, Cassimer, was not Maria Bickford. Notwithstanding the evidence below of Priscilla Blood, we are inclined, from circumstances that have come to our knowledge, to believe, that this name "Cassimer" may also be one of Maria's aliases. It appears by Mrs. Lawrence's testimony, that Tirrell, or DeWolf, went occasionally by the name of Cassimer, and also Maria.

[From Boston Times, Oct. 29]

At this stage the jury retired, and returned in half an hour. The witnesses in the case were then called, and bound over to the November term of the Supreme Court, being the second Tuesday in November. The witnesses will also appear before the grand jury on Monday next. The verdict of it qu's was then read:

"That Maria Bickford, alias Maria A. Bickford. came to her death on the morning of October 27th, 1846, by wounds inflicted by one Albert J. Tirrell, otherwise called Albert J. De Wolf, with a razor, cutting her throat in a manner to cause instant death; and the jurors aforesaid, on their oaths, do say, that the said Albert J. Tirrell, otherwise called Maria A. Bickford, did kill and murder against the pace of this Commonwealth and the laws of the same."

We have learned the following facts, which will be found of interest as connected with the late tragical occurrence in this city:

For some weeks during the last summer, Tirrell and Mrs. Bickford bourded together as man and wife, at the Hanover Street House. To avoid auspicion, they took their meels at a private table, and their illegal association was not discovered by the landlord till his suspicions were excited by information furnished him by persons from Weymouth, who were acquainted with Tirrell, Tirrell, was in the hand of parameters of the father of Tirrell died about a year since, leaving property to the amount of about $25,000. Much of it was in real estate, which was disposed of from time to time, at a great sacrifice, in order to realize available means, so far as Albert's portion was concerned. There were gotiations to save him from that prosecution could be opened.

Anti-Rent Fugitives.—Yesterday Mr. Levalley, with one of the constables of Troy township, determined to beat the bush, as he had watched it till he was satisfied that he should find game. The scene of operation was a wild and lonely mountain in the south-western part of Bradford county. Scudder, the murderer of Steele, was the main object of pursuit. Suffice it to say that while they were searching the woods they unexpectedly found Elmer, one of the Delaware chiefs. He was sitting upon a log quite alone. The sheriff came up to him and pronounced him a prisoner. Upon this he darted away and began to cry "murder!" at the top of his voice. This soon brought to his assistance some 10 persons, like him fugitives from Delaware, armed with guns, pistols, pitchforks and spears. In short, the prisoner was rescued, and the lives of the officers put in the greatest jeopardy. Resistance would have been the neight of folly, as there were but two, and only one of them armed, to contend with sixteen, all armed and desperate, and they were on a wild mountain, miles from any settlement. The officers remained on the mountain seme time, and in the meanwhile Elmer mounted a log and briefly addressed his fellow fugitives. He told them that this was their last resort; that the phoodbounds of the law had even scented out their retreat in the mountain fastnesses of Fennsylvania; that if they returned to Delaware, they were already doomed to a shameful death; that if they remained where they were, even should worst come to worst, they could but lose their lives. And in conclusion and in the name of the fugitives, he dared the public authorities to do their best intention of the law had even scented out their retreat in the mountain fastnesses of Fennsylvania; that if they returned to Delaware, they were already doomed to a shameful death; that if they remained where they were, even should worst come to worst, they could but lose their lives, he dared the public authorities

SUICIDE AND ATTEMPT AT MURDER.—On Monday night, about 11 o'clock, a horrible occurrence took place at the corner of South and Swanson streets. A man named Joseph Pope, keeping a tavern there, had been intoxicated for a considerable time, and after threatening to kill his wife and a child about four years of age, made an attack upon her with a shoemaker's awl, and sacrified her head and arms with it in many places. The supposition is that he thought he had killed her, and rushing from the cellar kitchen, where this part of the affair occurred, he mounted to the roof of the building, and clambering over the railing on the South street side, was precipitated, either by design or accident, to the pavement beneath—a distance of four stories. He was seen by a boy looking out of a window in the neighborhood at the time, to climb over the railing, but he was under the impression that he fell while in the act. The wretched man expired silmost immediately. The wife, in the meantime, rushed out of the cellar door on Swanson street, frantic from the effect ofher wounds, and the fear that her children would be murdered. She was taken care ef by the neighbors, and medical aid brought to her relief. She is wounded over the eye, on her left temple, in several other places on her head and arms, and one stab between her shoulders, besides feceiving various bruises. The blade of the awl being very short, prevented the stabs from being serious in their consequences, and there is at present no reason to fear a fatal termination. She has four children, and has often before suffered from the brutality of her husband during his frequent fits of intoxication.—Phil. Times, Oct. 29.

Synod of Pennsylvania.—This body metat Lewistown, Delaware, on Tuesday evening last. The steamboat Cohansoy was chartered for the trip, and a large number of the members, including the Rev. Mesars Barnes, Parker, Thompson, Brainard, Ely, &c., emburked on Tuesday. The wind blew agale when they reached the Capes, so that the boat was obliged to lie at the breakwater over night. As there were no berths, the provisions and water growing short, some danger of dragging the anchor, and the night cold, there was a good deal of discomfort in the position. But by eleven on Wednesday morning, the wind so lulled that the passen gers were carried in a whale boat to a schooner, and by that reached Lewistown at 2 P. M. The Rev. Thomas Brainard preached the Spnod sermon on Wednesday evening, and was chosen moderator for the next year.—Great harmony characterized all the proceedings. The third Presbytery of Philadelphis, having become too large, was divided. Strong resolutions were adopted in favor of Delaware College, which is under the patronage of the Synod. The members spoke in high terms of the hospitality of Lewistown. They reached here on Friday evening.—Phila Chron. Oct. 29.

Highly Censurable and Uniust.—The Feliciana

Highly Censurable and Unjust.—The Feliciana Whog calls our attention to a communication in the Southern Reformer, revealing instances of criminal venality upon the part of slave owners in some portions of Mississippi, which ontail lasting infamy upon all concerned. The writer censures in severe terms, those who have been guilty of running off their slaves to Louisiana, after their crimes have rendered them amenable to capital punishment under the criminal code of Mississippi. He instances five cases in which the slave has been "run," after having attempted to take the life of his master or mistress. Some prompt action should be taken to protect, our community from these repeated acts of heartiess venality. The present statutes should be revised and enforced, or others better calculated to suppress the evil should be enacted.—N. O. Pic. Oct. 21.

Robbery of the Express.—Circumstances have come to the knowledge of those interested, which leave no doubt that the moneytaken from Livingston and Well's express on Thursday night, is in this city, to gether with the villains who committed the robbery.—They and their booty are in concealment; and as a reward of one thousand dollars has been offered, we cannot doubt that the energy, vigilance, and effort thus stimulated to action, will be speedily successful in the recovery of the money. The key of the car from which the express trunk was stolen was found this morning in Fish street, near Brown's mill race, a few reds from the car house. The water was this afternoon drawn from the race in the expectation of finding the trunk, but the search was not successful.—Rochester American, Oct. 27.

DEATH OF E. S. THOMAS.—This gentleman, well known to many, died in Cincinnati on the 22d inst. He was of the family of Isaiah Thomas, of Worcester, Massachusetts. He removed to Charleston, S. C., and there conducted an extensive bookseling business. He published and conducted the Charleston Courier for a number of years. Subsequently he removed to Cincinnati, and established the Evening Post, which for four or five years he conducted here. Since that he has published his Reminiscences, in two volumes, quite an entertaining book.—Cincinnati Chron.

INTEMPERANCE AND INSANITY IN CANADA. - We met

The following figures, taken from official documents, will show the immense imports of liquors into the province and the increase of receipt of one year over the other.

This quantity will allow five gallons to each inhabitant of the Province, male and female, over 15 years of age, per year. In no country in the world can such a table of consumption be made out, the allowance for each inhabitant of Great Britain being only eight tenths of a gallon per year. The article to which we refer, continues:—"Insamity is generally believed to be hereditary, and it certainly known to run in some families in the United States. There is an island in the British channel, containing some 35,000 population, and it is seldom any go off the island to marry, and in one sense of the word they have become one family. On this island, there is scarcely a family name which has not its meanners. To some degree, the excess of insamity in Lower Canada is to be accounted for, as but very few of the French marry out of French families; but still intemperance is the most prolific source."
